DIRECTOR'S NOTE

Pirate Lives! The Musical! began as an unlikely juxtaposition of popular culture and a pun. In 2005, the first iteration of Pirate Lives! opened for a fully improvised eight-week run at ImprovBoston, which explored the incongruous relationship between 17th century pirates and 20th century upper-crust socialites loosely based on characters found in the plays of Noel Coward. Each spontaneous performance deepened the comedic differences between these two worlds. Both separated by time but very alike in their sense of romance in our popular culture, a desire of the characters to explore beyond the role given to them, and an overwhelming sense of wistfulness.

Those familiar with the works of Coward will recognize references to some of his works, including Blithe Spirit, Private Lives, and others. Nautical fans will see pains were taken to use correct terminology (for the most part!) as the characters move about the Coward, the design of which was based on the last great wooden whaling ship, the Charles W. Morgan.

And so, a thank you to the original cast for providing such enduring inspiration, the current cast for their considerable talents and love of the show, and the aptly named Flat Earth Theatre for providing an ocean on which the Coward may sail again.
